Alcohol Awareness Month

April is Alcohol Awareness Month and with that comes the plea to take a hard look at what, when and why you may take a drink. Alcohol can and does destroy lives and here you will find some of the questions that will help you avoid those pitfalls.

Millions will Participate in Annual Turnoff

Children in the US watch almost three hours of television each day. In the course of a year, they spend more time in front of the tube (1,023 hours) than in school (900 hours). “The purpose of the TV-Turnoff Week is to take an extended break from this

Softball Safety

Well the softball season is here...We can tell by the sharp increase in accident reports. Some of the injuries are pretty severe causing a lot of unnecessary pain and many lost days away from work. These lost days away from work also cause additional pain for the shipmates who pickup the work load wt you are out. Lost work days also degrade our quality mission capabilities to our customers.

Below is a brief, softball brief for you players. Play hard, play strong, be competitive and enjoy yourself, but don't hurt yourself or anyone else...remember in the end, softball is a game and not combat.

Take care out there,
Dave Nelson
Naval Station Safety Director

Recommendations:

Recommendations include the following:

- a. Inspect the playing field before the game for potholes, slippery areas and obstructions.
- b. Wear rubber cleats or good quality athletic shoes. Do not wear metal cleats.
- c. Don't drink alcoholic beverages before or during play.
- d. Do stretching exercises and warm-ups for 10 to 15 minutes preceding play, as well as between innings.
- e. Enforce a no-sliding rule during command-sponsored picnics and all pickup games when stationary bases are used.
- f. Use break-away or safety bases, which allow the base to absorb the shock from an improper slide, vice the leg, ankle or foot. Always use proper sliding techniques. Coaches should provide guidance on sliding safely.
- g. Designate the center fielder to call players off outfield fly balls. In the infield, the shortstop should be assigned this job. These precautions will help reduce collisions.
- h. Spectators should stay away from sidelines unless fencing material is at least eight feet high. Some people have been seriously injured when struck by overthrown balls while seated in this area.
- i. Don't tolerate unnecessary horseplay and unsportsmanlike conduct.

Background:

A review of softball mishaps show most injuries are caused by lack of conditioning, improper sliding techniques, and collisions.

Examples:

The following are typical of mishap reports submitted to the Naval Safety Center:

a. An SN made a diving leap at a ball hit to shallow right field. His head impacted the right fielder's leg at full speed causing compression and crushing of three vertebrae. Permanent paralysis of both legs and his right arm has cost the Navy a young sailor whose only mistake was to be a little too aggressive chasing down a fly ball.

b. A LCDR slid late into a stationary base, broke his ankle and lost 30 days from work.

c. BU3 was running after a fly ball and misjudged how far away he was from the cement wall. He stuck his hand out to cushion the impact. He shattered his wrist. Pins were placed in his wrist. He lost 12 days from work.

d. While running to the outfield to catch a fly ball, SN and his teammate collided. He fell to the ground ant the other player stepped on his leg. He sustained a compound fracture to his leg. He lost 48 days from work.

e. FC2 was going after a fly ball and stepped into a hole. He hyperextended his knee. He received a fracture leg and lost 90 days from work.

A Stiff Drink

A Little Bit of History You Might Not Know

- LCDR Vincent A. Salamoni, CHC, USNR

Halls ... perhaps the most famous halls are the Halls of Montezuma made famous in the Marines Hymn. We have here on base, Bulkeley Hall, the administrative center, and Quick Hall, the chow hall on Marine Hill. I suppose there are also other halls on base.

Sometimes people don't care about halls; in fact, sometimes they only care about having a stiff drink. Sometimes they drink their cares away. They basically pickle their brains. But their cares return the next morning and their troubles are worse than before the binge.

There is an old sea story about Admiral Nelson. As he was dying he whispered, "Not over the side." A burial at sea was not for him. His body would be brought back to England from foreign waters. His shipmates, to prevent decomposition, placed his corpse in a barrel of brandy. Talk about being pickled! When HMS Victory made a port call, they drained the alcohol out and replaced it with formaldehyde. Then, some of the blokes more desperate for a drink actually drank the original batch. That might have been the first use of the expression "a stiff drink!" Gross!

But evidently for some, it wasn't gross. It's an example of why alcohol abuse is considered an illness.

So, instead of taking a stiff drink, perhaps you could take a leisurely stroll and explore beautiful Guantanamo. You might want to look for Alka Hall. While doing so you just might see beautiful water scenes or interesting wild-life, feel balmy breezes, smell fresh air, find some shells, listen to the sound of the surf, see the stars or enjoy some of the other best things in life ... and they're all free!

Making the rounds and hitting the high notes...

Above: The "Braves" take the field in anticipation of some hard line drives coming their way off the bats of the "Rockies" batters (The tall guys are the coaches).

Watching a T-Ball game at GTMO's Brandon Field brings smiles to the faces of parents and other spectators as the kids go through the process of learning the game.

They start off with batting off a tee, the origin of the game's name, so pitching is not a factor in the game just yet. They also don't have to worry about making it to first, second, third, etc., in fact they score every time they get up to bat.

Competition isn't the highlight of the game for the T-Ball players, it's a learning process that helps them to develop skills, fielding batting,

There isn't much else that generates as much seasonal excitement as baseball. Baseball has many different incarnations, Little League, High School, College, Triple A, Double A and major league professional play to name a few.

One of those incarnations is the one that introduces young people to the sport, T-Ball. It's not exactly the same as its more evolved counterparts, but you'd be hard pressed to find a T-Ball parent who doesn't find the games just as exciting.

The rules vary a little, in that GTMO T-Ball doesn't keep score, there are no outs, and everyone scores, every time they bat.

Coaches are a big part of the game in T-Ball. They stand behind the batters, giving tips on grip, stance and swing. Here, the Rockies Coach,

Even if you don't have children playing, the excitement is contagious and the games bring smiles to everyone on the field, and in the stands.

gives tips to his batter and the results are a strong hit into the infield that somehow makes its way into shallow left field.

running and teamwork, that will benefit them when they make the transition into the more advanced levels in the coming years.

The young ball players don't have to worry about getting their turn at bat either. Every player on the team bats once every inning. Each at bat puts them on base, and every trip onto the base paths brings them home.

So how do you determine the winner of the game if there is not score kept and no way keeping the batters off the bases? You look at the faces of the young players and listen to the cries of excitement every time they take the field.

No matter where the ball is hit, the coaches urge the runners down the base paths with words of encouragement and stand in the field to coach base offensive base running to defensive fielding techniques and strategy ("where do I throw the ball?"). Above: As the ball makes its way toward the outfield, the base runners streak to the next goal on the base paths. Right: While waiting for the next hit, base runners are asked by coaches where they are going to run to next. Below: Even though there isn't any danger of getting thrown out at the next base, the adrenaline levels are still high as the kids pour on the steam to make it to the next bag. Parents act as base coaches and encourage the kids as they excitedly round the bases.

And the season is underway!

An Undersea Success

Reef Raiders 5th Annual Easter Egg Event coordinator

Reef Raiders 5th Annual Easter Egg Event was held at Cable Beach on Saturday. The event was open to all Base residents and many came out to join Reef Raiders for a morning of fun.

The event brought in a good number of participants anxious for a morning of snorkeling, diving, food, fun and prizes. Events included adults and older kids diving and snorkeling for Easter-egg rocks outside the tidal pool, and younger kids snorkeled for money and plastic Easter eggs within the tidal pool.

There was face painting, a land-based Easter egg hunt and egg tossing - raw, of course! Prizes were presented to divers and snorkelers who retrieved Easter-rocks as well as door prizes.

Each child received an Easter goodie bag and a prize. Lunch and drinks were provided by Reef Raiders.

Reef Raiders Dive Club would like to thank everyone who put in so much time

"Three hours of TV-watching a day is simply unhealthy for our children, families and communities," said Susan Stanton, spokesperson of the local event.

TV-Turnoff Week is coordinated by TV-Turnoff Network, a national nonprofit organization that encourages adults and children to watch much less television in order to promote healthier lives and communities. It enjoys the support of dozens of major

GREEN MORAY EEL

By Paul Schoenfeld
Natural Resources Manager

The Green Moray Eel (Gymnothorax funebris) is the common moray often seen at GTMO by divers and occasionally hooked by unsuspecting anglers. Green morays are a uniform green color with no distinguishing markings other than a white chin on adults. Juveniles lack the white chin. This eel's color is a result of a yellowish mucous over the dark blue skin. The mucous is a protective covering that shields the eel from diseases and parasites.

Green morays are found in the mid-Atlantic from New Jersey through Bermuda, the Gulf of Mexico, throughout the Caribbean and south to Brazil. These are among the largest eels normally growing to more than six feet long and weighing approximately 30 pounds. The largest reported was eight feet and weighed 65 pounds.

Very little is known regarding green moray spawning however, morays do lay eggs. Upon hatching, the larvae, called leptocephali, are transparent and shaped like ribbons. They drift along the currents with plankton until they transform into juveniles. After the transformation from larvae, juvenile morays resemble adults.

Morays have large teeth with 2 rows in the front upper jaw, a set called vomerine teeth in the roof of the mouth, and a single row of teeth in the lower jaw. This formidable set of teeth, combined with their elongated and flattened body, is an adaptation for catching prey in the coral reef environment, where morays spend most of their lives. They are nocturnal predators who use their sense of smell to locate prey hiding among holes and crevices inside reefs. They can easily move throughout the entire reef system finding prey and then subduing prey with the large set of teeth. Morays feed primarily on fish, crabs and shrimp.

Morays may appear threatening to observers because they open and close their mouths frequently and expose their teeth. This behavior is actually an aid to breathing and not a threatening gesture. Morays are very inactive with low oxygen demands and small gills. When opening and closing their mouths, they are actually pumping water through their gills to pick up oxygen for breathing.

Green morays occupy a very high level in the food chain and have few, if any, natural predators. They are occasionally eaten by local human populations however, due to their level in the food chain and association with coral reefs, the risk for ciguatera poisoning from eating green morays is considered high. (Ciguatera is a toxin that may be present in coral reefs and bio-accumulates in predators eating ciguatera toxic prey.)

Most human interaction with green morays is SCUBA divers observing them in the reef. It is best to just observe them and not attempt to feed or make physical contact. Green morays have bitten people and when they bite, it is severe. Likewise, divers investigating holes and crevices with their hands may also be bitten. If you are bitten by a green moray, seek medical attention promptly.

LOST & FOUND

2 pair Lost Glasses - One pair prescription glasses. I lost them last week I believe during the rainstorm. They are a pair of rimless prescription glasses always in a brown eyeglass case. The glasses have a blue upper rim. Inside the glass case should be a green lens cloth written on it "Cohen's Fashion Optical". The other pair are sunglasses, no case. They are brown Ray Bans with a gold rim. I lost them 2-3 weeks ago I believe in the Marine Hill Area. If anyone happens to located any of these pairs please call Sarah at 8004.
